Honestly the mosy disturbing portion of the entire elections was how Karpov was treated by his entire camp, less Conn.

Conn was the only one to stand through with him to the bitter end. Kasparov disappeared on Karpov during vote counting. His other running mates from Serbia, Ukraine, and Angola were nowhere in sight. They abandoned their potential president and running mate (though none of them did any campaigning and were placed into position for various reasons).

This was a deplorable act. While I'm a Kirsan supporter and wanted to see Karpov lose, I did not wish to see him treated by his own running mates like this. Shame on Kasparov for this. Shame on his other running mates. Kudos to Conn for standing by Karpov to the bitter end.

Mr. Conn may be inexperienced in FIDE, but he is clearly a class act.

Cordially,

Tim Redman
